

The public airways belong to the American People. The FCC was created to insure that the airways serve the public interest, not the interests of corporate conglomerates. The public interest is best served by retaining (and strengthening) the current rules limiting the ownership of the broadcast media.